The influence of phenobarbital, phenytoin, indomethacin and their combination on the binding of [3H]dexmefloquin ([3H]DM) to brain membranes was studied. Pretreatment of the animals with phenobarbital (50 mg/kg/24 hr i.p.) for 4 days, with phenytoin (100 mg/kg/24 hr p.o.) for 4 days or with indomethacin (5 mg/kg/24 hr s.c.) for 3 days decreased the binding of [3H]DM to brain membranes. The same pattern of the effect of the pretreatments with these drugs on the binding was observed, when radioactivity in the brain tissue was determined after treatment. The binding of [3H]DM to brain membranes was decreased after pretreatment of rats with phenobarbital or phenytoin (10, 30 and 50 mg/kg/24 hr i.p.), or indomethacin (3 mg/kg/24 hr s.c.). Pretreatment of rats with phenobarbital, phenytoin and indomethacin together for 4 days increased the binding of [3H]DM to brain membranes. Treatment of rats with phenobarbital (50 mg/kg/24 hr i.p.) and phenytoin (100 mg/kg/24 hr p.o.) decreased the binding of [3H]DM to brain membranes. However, the combination of phenobarbital and phenytoin did not produce any significant changes in the binding of [3H]DM. These results indicate that phenobarbital, phenytoin and indomethacin affect the binding of
