Matthew Kenny says statements made by the animal rights activist leading the charge in the post's downfall are "malicious, false, and damaging." Matthew Kenny, CEO of an organization called "Catch 22," says in a Facebook post that the organization is "ashamed" for associating with the man it calls the "Dog Rapist." "We have defended [the man] in the past and will defend him in the future. But his recent actions are false and malicious, and cannot be tolerated," Kenny said. "The allegation made against Mr. Emory has unfortunately caused some significant damage to our organization." Kenny says the dog advocate has since been fired from the organization because he "disrupted a major fundraiser and will no longer receive any awards, grants, or support." Matthew Kenny, CEO of Catch 22, says in a Facebook post that the organization is "ashamed" for associating with Emory Johnson, who Kenny calls the "Dog Rapist." (Facebook/Catch 22) "Mr. Emory Johnson is the personification of evil and has NO place in the animal rescue movement," Kenny added. "He is not an appropriate person to associate with or to fundraise for 3e33713323
