Egypt Basketball: Khaled El-Koby Returns To The Starting Lineup Against San Antonio After the departure of leading scorers Michael Carter-Williams, T.J. Campbell, Giorgi Shermadini and Peter Korishek, a fifth-consecutive loss for the Retrievers (4-8 overall, 0-5 in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference) will probably not come as a big surprise, especially with a need to win to avoid falling out of the regular-season race. But now with Khaled El-Koby returning to the starting lineup and another player healthy, the Retrievers face a decided test at the Mullins Center. The freshman forward started in the losses to Providence, Wagner, Yale and Central Connecticut, averaging 7.3 points, 6.3 rebounds, 2.0 assists and 1.4 blocks in 23.5 minutes. In the five losses the Retrievers have suffered this season, El-Koby played nearly 14 minutes more than in any of those games. Averaging 17.6 minutes, 6.6 points, 6.3 rebounds and 1.8 assists in those games, he had the best field-goal percentage of any Retriever and the highest average of three-point attempts (1.6). When El-Koby, a 5-foot-11 native of Alexandria, was made available to reporters after Tuesday's practice, he didn't mince words on why he hadn't played as much. "Coach just told me that I had to gain some playing time," El-Koby said. "I think it's maybe going to be more of a veteran standpoint. We'll go out there together, and we can come back to the bench together," he added. El-Koby was 5-of-6 from the floor against Sacred Heart on Nov. 10, but he did finish with just one rebound, two assists and one steal in 16 minutes. He's only 6-of-14 on field goals, including 1-of-5 on threes, since the Nov. 10 game. And although he played an average of 19.6 minutes in the losses to Central Connecticut, Mount St. Mary's and Sacred Heart, El-Koby has played a total of 37.7 minutes of his team's 47 games

Share this story Story Photos NECPA and 49 other groups are asking the San Juan County commission to deny a permit for a mine that they say will foul air and water and devastate birds in the region. One of the project's managers said the public has no reason to be concerned if the mine is properly sited, located away from homes and areas where people gather, and removed once it is mined. He also said the project is really expensive. The mine would cost about $1.1 billion to build, at a cost of $400,000 per acre. The details of the argument over the mine were laid out Friday in the hearings on the project. One of the opponents, environmental lawyer Richard Stroup, said he knows a lot of people are worried about the mine, and he's asked that the commission set a date to release the mine permit into the public's hands. He told the commissioners the public needs time to look closely at the issues. "If it moves forward, I would ask that this commission release the permit into the public's hands, put a moratorium on it, and start the process to try to figure this thing out," Stroup said. The proposed mine isn't scheduled to open until 2017, but the public will get a chance to weigh in for about the next two months. The commissioners say they hope to have a final decision by early March. "I don't want to rush it, because I think we need more time," Commissioner Martha Chalfie said. Stroup and the others, who are representing the public, have until April 3 to file exceptions with the commission to make their arguments. Commissioner Martha Chalfie said she doesn't want the permit decision to be rushed, and she fears a decision that sends a strong signal to other states could have a domino effect on the proposed mines that are up for decision.
