NEW DELHI: India's push to cut Indian-administered Kashmir off from the rest of the world will get a strong pushback from the United States because of its implications for a "blood brother" strategic relationship. A series of measures in the last few months suggest that the Modi government wants to allow in trade and logistics only. Other steps, if approved, will seek to isolate the region from the rest of the world by cutting it off from direct access by aircraft, and from telecommunications. These measures were drawn up by the Home Ministry and the MEA, that briefed the Home Ministry before it was taken to the Cabinet. The measure was meant to present a message to Pakistan, that India is laying the foundation for a self-sufficient Kashmir. The earlier measures had indicated that India would not let the world know what is happening in Jammu and Kashmir, but that was before India's track record in overt support for rebels in Palestine, and in allowing Pakistani arms to reach militants in India. Modi told Parliament on February 20 that the measures to be taken in Jammu and Kashmir will be "internally developmental" and that these will "not adversely impact human rights", but that was before the release of the video showing the beheading of a soldier. But US Senator John McCain has already warned of the effects that the move will have on India-Pakistan ties. Senior diplomats and the Army said the measures are draconian. They say if a move is made to cut off trade, and communications, that would give a big clue to Pakistan. But External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj told Parliament on February 22: "We cannot block it. We have to. You can block it only legally through this Cabinet Committee."A prospective, randomized, comparative study of caudal bupivacaine and dexmedetomidine vs. ropivacaine and dexmedetomidine for cesarean delivery under spinal anesthesia. To evaluate whether adding the α2-agonist dexmedetomidine to ropivacaine or bupivacaine decreases the sensory and motor block or increases the side effects in patients undergoing elective cesarean delivery under spinal anesthesia. This prospective, randomized, double-blind, parallel-group, controlled, and dose-escalating study involved 150 pregnant women undergoing elective cesarean delivery under spinal anesthesia. Patients were randomly assigned to receive spinal anesthesia with 8 mL of 0.3% hyperbaric ro
